

The Slav Invasion and the Mine Workers: A Study in Immigration (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Slav Invasion and the Mine Workers: A Study in Immigration
The recent change in the character of immigration to the United States, by which natives of Poland, Austria, Hungary, Russia, Italy, etc., have very largely supplanted those previously coming from Ireland, England, Wales, Germany, Scotland, etc., is having far-reaching effects upon American institutional and industrial life. This particular study in immigration points out the most important of these effects by presenting the results of a first-hand investigation of actual conditions in the anthracite coalfields of Northeastern Pennsylvania.
