

The State and the Poor (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The State and the Poor
No one who has had any practical experience as a Poor Law Administrator of the 350 or 400 statutes, of the 5000 judicial decisions interpreting those statutes, and of the Poor Law and Local Government Board orders (which if printed with those statutes would cover more than 2500 octavo pages, and with all of which he is supposed to be personally acquainted), would undertake to write a book, still less a short book, on them a c?ur leger. As a matter of fact, the following pages were drafted as a memorandum for the information of a political friend, and only profess to indicate some of the factors in the most pressing Poor Law problems. They would never have been submitted to the public gaze but for pressure applied to me by competent judges, who assured me that something of the kind was urgently needed, and but for the kindly assistance and supervision promised me by Mr Charles Booth and others.
