We all have 24 hours, we all have some strengths and few weaknesses, than why only few of us achieve a state that we all call SUCCESS? The answer is simple, most of us spend more time on things that are not important just because we are interrupted, psychologically disrupted or distracted and lost focus and concentration on things that really matter for our success in our relationships, life, business and your career. Most of those who are known as achievers or successful person around us posses a one common skill that is an ability to focus and concentrate on their priorities. The group of highly successful people posses one common skill, they are less distracted by the distractions, stay focus on their goals and ends up achieving much more than the masses or people around them. Concentration and better focus does not only mean to avoid distractions and disruptions, but it also means better self control on emotions, better decision making and an effective control over surroundings. According to the latest research by Talent Smart that includes over a million top performers, almost 90% of the top performers are highly skilled in managing their emotions at times of stress by keeping calm and control. In a nutshell, if we all want to achieve things that we really want in life, we have to work on skills like better focus and concentration. You can also call it a prerequisite of success. So how do you improve your ability to focus and concentrate and avoid disruptions? Dont worry, to make things easier for you, I have shared some of the most effective ways to improve your
