

Christian and Daddy Go Shopping (Money Smart Kids Book 1)

Earn It, Save It, Give It, Grow It! Begin teaching your kids about money early: Five-year-old Christian is a wide-eyed, inquisitive child who learns valuable lessons from his money smart daddy. The kindergartener is excited and full of ideas about how to spend money. His plans become more practical, though, after he realizes his family doesn't have enough money for everything he wants. One afternoon, Christian and his daddy take a trip to the store to buy a birthday gift for Mommy and end up taking a fantastic, mathematical journey into the land of Money Smart Kids! Christian and Daddy Go Shopping is the first book in a series that addresses basic financial literacy concepts for youngsters. Come along, as Christian's daddy engages him in kid-friendly conversation that makes talk about money both engaging and clear and provides examples that explode in his son's creative mind, leaving indelible images the boy will remember long after the lesson is over. We should count the cost of everything so we spend the right amounts, Christian will observe, in time, after having a big-boy talk with Daddy. This tale, made alive through Kenji's compelling illustrations, provides age-appropriate lessons for understanding money, designing spending plans, and making consumer decisions. Christian and his daddy address these lessons during their trip to the store, making this narrative an intriguing and educational venture for children and parents to share.
