

Emotional Elicitation of Dreams

In this thesis, the author explores the relationship of dreams with underlying emotions. Further, the author explores the relationship of dreams and their diagnostic value to mental ailments such as PTSD, Anxiety, and many other mental illnesses positively correlated with sleep disturbances. Furthermore, the author elucidates the significance of dreams and backs his assertions up with scientific and academically sound research. If you enjoy understanding the scientific and technical facts about dreams, this is a read you will not want to put down. If you are a mental health therapist or patient, this thesis provides valuable clinical value. The author highlights the fact that therapists that discuss the content of dreams with their patients, report a significant benefit to the outcome of therapy.
