

Riding for Ladies (Illustrated)

A Victorian take on how to ride for women in the 19th century! Nannie Lambert Power ODonoghue was the youngest child in the family of Charles Lambert of Athenry, and a member of a well-known landlord family of County Galway. She married William Power ODonoghue and became a highly respected journalist as well as an accomplished equestrian. One of her volumes, Riding for Ladies, was translated into five languages and over 94,000 copies were printed. Her novel, A Beggar on Horseback, sold over 23,000 copies. In her capacity as a journalist, Nannie contributed prose pieces to a variety of newspapers. Her articles often concerned social issues and animal welfare.
